Chapter 1 by Edwin Njoh

Station Square, the popular mega city. It was Filled with uniquely designed skyscrapers. The city was the land for the rich and had many attractions, but this dream city that was placed on the south of the united federation continent had one noteworthy thing about it. A blue coloured hero lived there. He had unmatched-able speed and wore red sneakers that could be spotted from afar. He had the attitude of a rock star. He was filled with levity and confidence, but his bravery could be compared to a lion. He had emerald green eyes and a smirk that yelled cockiness. He lived on the outskirts of station square with his roommate/best friend tails. The character was an icon, a huge part of station square and its main attraction. A hero in the making. His name was...

.....SONIC THE HEDGEHOG.

The one thing sonic loved was chili dogs. A hot dog filled with rich hot chili and chopped up beef. He would always have it at the well-known chili dog restaurant entitled, "RED HOTS" in the afternoon. The building had a new lively exterior that was welcoming, filled with lights and deals stuck on the wide glass windows. Sonic felt the urge to go in since his stomach was as hollow as a tunnel. He entered.

Straight away a round of applause could be heard within the shop. All the customers clapped and cheered as sonic entered the scene. This was expected since sonic was claimed by the world as a saviour. He responded, "Thank you very much!" and made his way to the counter.

"Do I really have to say?"

"Two chili dogs coming on the double!" the man yelled, as he turned to the kitchen behind him.

Suddenly, all the cheery banter that filled the shop switched to shrieks of horror. The clear blue skies turned into a gloomy grey coating. Lightning came crashing down from the heavens. Huge gust of winds began to rush through the city.

Cars flipping.

Building windows began to crack.

People being swept off their feet by the storm.

Everyone in the shop began to hide under tables in fear. Sonic just as he was handed his chili dogs turned around. What he saw wasn't what he expected. He warned everyone to stay hidden in the shop, without fail they obeyed. He dashed outside to inspect the situation. His beloved city began to crumble before his very eyes....
